

University of Denver's Jimmie Smith presents:

Keys to Optimizing Learning and Minimizing Frustration

by applying the principles of Universal Design for Learning (UDL)

Wednesday, March 19th

7:00 – 8:30pm

Wolcott School
524 N Wolcott Ave
Chicago, IL 60622

Jimmie Smith, Director of the Learning Effectiveness Program at the University of Denver, will lead participants and professionals in a hands-on workshop designed to help participants:

- Identify their particular learning styles and that of their students, children and clients
- Develop support strategies that best match individual learning styles
- Learn how to apply UDL communication strategies in the classroom, workplace and home
- Understand how schools, including colleges, use UDL to teach to the diverse learners of today and train their faculty to do the same

RSVP to Niki Aquino at naquino@wolcottschool.org or (312) 610-4900

What is UDL?

UDL provides a blueprint for creating instructional goals, methods, materials and assessments that work for everyone – not a single, one size fits all solution, but rather flexible approaches that can be customized and adjusted for individual needs.

What is Wolcott School?

Wolcott School offers an exemplary high school program for students with learning differences, tailored to the strengths and aspirations of each student. Employing best practices, our expert faculty is dedicated to helping students gain self-awareness, confidence and resilience as well as the academic, social and communication skills to flourish in college and beyond. As valued members of our diverse and close-knit community, Wolcott students develop their sense of responsibility and purpose.

Now Accepting Application for the 2014 – 2015 school year!

Hosted by The James Tyree Community Resource Center at Wolcott School